Excerpt: .which protects and covers the sleeping balconies, as such a roof would not shut out the light from the rooms when the curtains are drawn back and would be more durable than canvas alone. Also, that the bedrooms opening on the porches can be constructed of a smaller calibre, as the beds are chiefly out of doors and the rooms are used merely for dressing. The building has a capacity for twenty-five patients. The estimated cost was $45,000. The Tuberculosis Hospital, Washington, D. C. (Illustrations, 35 and 36). This hospital was built at a remarkably low cost, and is interesting in the way it is planned to house advanced and incipient, white and colored, male and female patients; each group in a separate wing or on a different floor. The hospital is planned to provide accommodations in separate wards on the first floor for white and colored males who are in the later stages of the disease; and the second floor is arranged in the same manner for white and colored females. The incipient cases of both sexes, white and colored, are housed in open-air wards on the third and fourth floors. These open wards are roof gardens with casement windows on the north, but are entirely open on the east, south and west sides. A careful study of the arrangement of the wards, noting the allotment of floor space to the different classes of patients, is interesting. The length of the building along the...
