Excerpt: . . . therefore, leave the tourniquet or pad in position as long as you dare, say two hours. In the meantime procure an antiseptic compress or have one prepared in the manner already described. Place this gently on the wound and bandage firmly in place so as to make strong pressure on the Fig. 38. --Tourniquet Applied to Femoral Artery. bleeding point. The pressure-between the heart and the wound may now be gradually released. If the bleeding does not recommence, well and good; if it does, the tourniquet or pad must be reapplied. Another attempt to remove it should not be made for at least an hour, as time is needed for the clot to reform. Suppose, at first, and this is by no means improbable, that you have failed to stop the bleeding by pressure between the heart and the bleeding point--there is still no reason...

Reviews

Extensive information for book fans. It is written in basic words and never hard to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

-- Otis Wisoky

This publication is great. It is full of wisdom and knowledge You will not really feel monotony at any time of the time (that's what catalogs are for relating to when you ask me).
