Salt Publishing, United Kingdom, 2005. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 212 x 138 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Adam Czerniawski s poetry springs from a conjunction of Polish and English (or perhaps European) culture. Deeply rooted in the Polish language, he is at the same time a poet of universal themes observed from a wide perspective of the Western world. I would even claim that this poetry springs from a different basis of culture and literary tradition, that he has managed to set himself free from many complexes of contemporary Polish poetry, to grasp and see them from a global perspective. Additionally, there is his special position as a poet standing outside the emigre cultural life, which gives him the advantage of distance, of reserve and of being above the current disputes and entanglements. The art which he practises enables us to count him among poets of culture full of erudition and various tropes which bear witness to his inheriting the great tradition of European culture. -Konstanty Pienkosz, Literary critic My favourite poems by Adam Czerniawski include Seaside Holiday , Interior Topography (one of his best poems), You and I , Man , Science Fiction , Listening to a Schubert Quartet , World , Bridge , Fish , Triangle , A View of Delft , Evening, or a Field of Vision , Token of Remembrance and Golden Age . These poems display a dialectical synthesis of feeling and awareness; without falling below the level of the author s understanding - and let s note that it is a philosophical understanding rare among Polish poets (Milosz is a philosopher of a totally different kind) - these poems do not leave feelings behind, and this is precisely what works in their favour. -Bogdan Czaykowski, Poet and...
